

A voice of our own

About us

People with Disability Australia (PWDA) is a national disability rights, advocacy and representative organisation that is made up of, led and governed by people with disability.

We're a not-for-profit community-based organisation with a diverse membership of individuals and organisations from across Australia.

We work on a national and international level to create change on a systemic level. We also support our community with individual advocacy.

Need help?

We provide information to people from anywhere in Australia and individual advocacy to people with disability in New South Wales and Queensland. The things we can help with include:

- NDIS Appeals and complaints
- disability housing problems
- complaints about services
- violence, abuse, neglect and exploitation
- access to the National Redress Scheme
- disability discrimination.

Disability rights

PWDA works towards change on a wide range of disability rights issues. Some of our current rights-based work includes:

- NDIS – making the system work for people with disability
- preventing violence against people with disability
- human rights for people with disability
- accessible and affordable housing
- employment
- improving accessibility of services.

Disability training

PWDA provides professional education and flexible training packages on a range of topics, including:

- providing access for people with disability
- disability awareness
- NDIS
- sexuality and relationships
- responding to abuse and neglect of people with disability.
